THE DAILY INTERVIEW

Michelle Reinhardt

Here at The Glorious Pickle Times, we interview local people we know. But Michelle Reinhardt used to interview important people she never met for a living. "I started in high school, where I was a reporter for a local paper," she says. "I've been a TV reporter, newspaper reporter, producer, CBS news, ABC news, until about fifteen years ago." Since then, Michelle has worked for Latakoo, helping send things called 'packages' to news companies. Her favorite things about being in the news business are that she could pretty much be paid to learn something new every day. However, being under a deadline all the time was not so great. "People don't have time to talk to you, or won't answer the phone, but there's still a broadcast at six or a newspaper needing to get out." When asked the most interesting story she ever reported, she said, "I worked in Louisville where they do the Kentucky Derby, and we would do derby coverage all week and it was super fun." Michelle was a pretty big deal, too - she's interviewed Billy Ray Cyrus, The Judds, Bill Clinton, and Mitch McConnell!
